WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Strong offshore winds are expected tonight through Saturday evening in Southern California mountainous areas and desert areas.
 - Wind gusts of 55 to 65 knots are expected over the Coastal Mountains.
 - Gusts of 30 to 45 knots over California Deserts.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

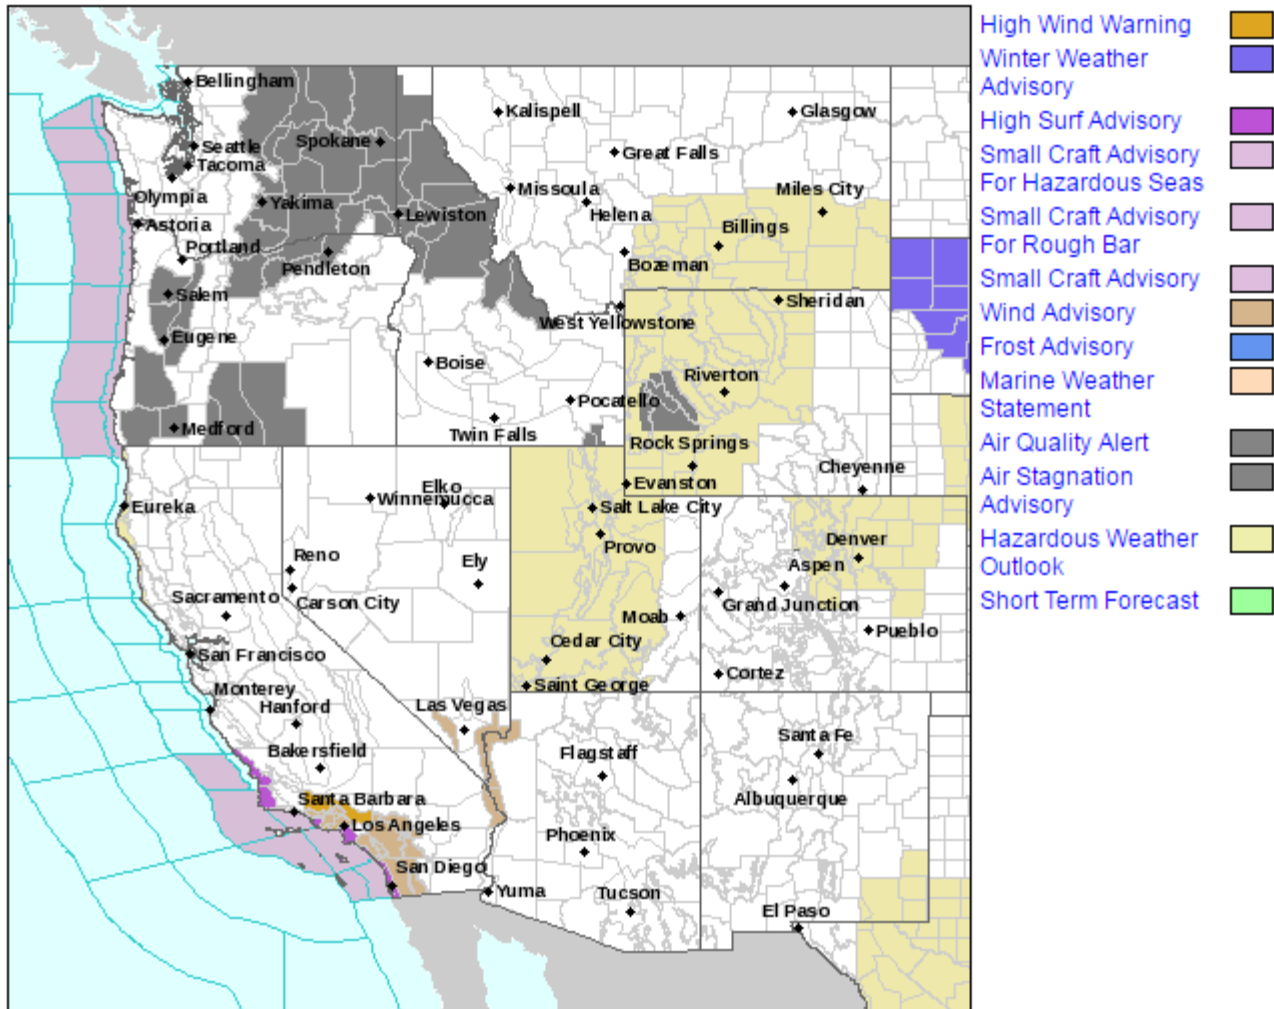

Strong high pressure will be over the region through Monday. Some valleys and canyons will see strong inversions develop and last throughout the day, while most other areas undergo a drying and warming trend. North-Northeast / Offshore winds will gust to 25-35 mph in wind-prone areas from the western Sierra slopes to the coast, mainly during mornings. The most wind-prone areas in the Sierra could see gusts of 40-50 mph. At this time it appears that the storm track will return to the region by next Tuesday night or Wednesday and wet unsettled weather will last through the end of next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A dome of cold surface high pressure across the western Great Basin will generate gusty offshore winds across portions of the forecast area through Saturday night. Tonight through Saturday night, winds may be 5-10 mph weaker, but still gusty, in the same areas. Winds will be light for the most part by Sunday. Temperatures will remain cool Saturday, but expect the offshore winds to bring some warming early next week. By Monday, temperatures will be in the 40s to lower 50s in the mountains to the mid and upper 70s at lower elevations of Southern California. Low temperatures will be highly variable the next few nights due to the offshore flow; however, wind sheltered areas may see freezing temperatures the next few nights. A trough is expected to reach the northern part of the state next Tuesday and Wednesday. Widespread wetting rains can be expected over Central California Tuesday night into Wednesday with light showers possible further south. Rainfall from this system will be far, far less than last weekend. Temperatures will cool to near normal readings by the middle of next week. Another system may reach the area the weekend of the 4th.
